DIALECTIC

BY JAMES A. ARIETI

THOMPSON PROFESSOR OF CLASSICS

Complaints about teaching, like the poor student, are always with us. Complaints fall into two classes: (1) complaints about what is being taught, as in the case of the Whole Math or, less recently, of the New Math; (2) complaints about the method of teaching, as in the "look-see" method of teaching reading. Well, Socratic dialectic is the New Math, the "look-see" method, and atheistic communism all rolled up in one.

Because there is so much suspicion of the Socratic method—and I, better than most people, know this suspicion—I thought it might be worthwhile to trace its sources. First, of course, is the claim to truth—not so much that the practitioner of dialectic claims to know truth—though he is often accused of so claiming—but that he claims that truth exists at all. In a pluralistic, progressive, relativistic society, such a claim is taboo, and I use the word "taboo" with full awareness of its implications.

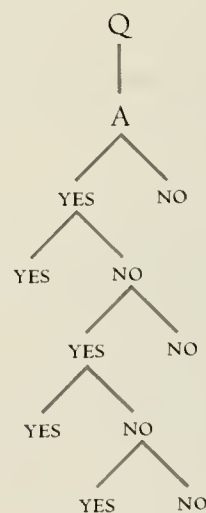

Closely connected with the claim that truth exists, and can be found, is the method for doing so. In fact, the two are almost one. The very method engenders suspicion, for interlocutors on the receiving end of questions often feel frustrated. They are convinced that some kind of verbal trick or sophistry is being practiced on them, only they can't put their finger on how. I do not expect that many of my readers will take dialectic up; but it is my hope that when you or someone you run into uses it, that you won't turn off and away.

Successful dialectic rests on the following assumptions: (1) that truth exists; (2) that truth is the reasoned agreement of two human beings following the rules of reason; (3) that inconsistency, that is, contradiction, is the surest sign available that the conclusion reached is not true, i.e., is false; (4) that both people must be willing to "stay at their posts" and argue until consistency is reached, for truth is the mother of certainty and certainty is the mother of repose, and the soul of mankind longs to be at rest.

Of these points, the one that generates the greatest suspicion in most people is the importance placed on consistency. Such suspicion takes two forms: (a) consistency can be narrow-minded and rigorous and hence impractical; (b) too often it degenerates into mere pedantry, into hair-splitting and quibbling about words, a kind of philosophic legalism.

Coupled with this suspicion is a suspicion about the very method of inquiry—the technique of question and answer. Most people feel that they are being manipulated by the questioner and driven into saying things that they did not believe or, perhaps even worse, into having some minor inconsistency in their position exposed, as if minor inconsistency were unimportant. Well, for the true dialectician, truth is like virginity.

Yet it is the answerer, not the questioner, who controls the course of the discussion, at least in an ideal dialectical session. Each person may corrupt the ideal, the answerer no less than the questioner. Here is a schematic diagram of the ideal way in which a session of dialectic should operate:

Now Q stands for Questioner, A stands for Answerer. The topic is not chosen by either but instead grows up out of the actual circumstances in which the speakers find themselves. Not that the questioner ought to frame his questions, wherever possible, in such a way that the answer can be given either Yes or No. In my diagram, for the sake of simplicity, I've assumed that all questions are so framed. Now observe that the answerer is free to say either Yes or No and that the questioner must take the answer and work with it. The questioner is not allowed to say, "Oh, I don't really want a No there; I want a Yes. Please say Yes." Instead, the questioner must take the answer and, using it as the basis for his next question, ask the next question. To the second question also the answerer is free to say either Yes or No. And at each step, the questioner must go down the route chosen by the answerer. I have sketched how one typical set of questions and answers might go. As you can see, the number of permutations and combinations is huge. Each possible line represents a route that can be taken. Most of them—in fact, all but one—will result in contradiction, in perplexity. One will result in consistency and truth. As Aristotle observes, there are many ways to miss a target, only one way to hit it.

After a problem has been located and made specific, the technique that is called "dialectic" is a most useful tool. I'm willing to argue that almost anything can be taught by this method—though I'm willing to admit that it is not the most efficient method, efficient—that is—as far as time goes. It is by far the most efficient as far as retention and comprehension apply.

Dialectic presents some practical difficulties, both as a method and for the practitioner. First, it is difficult, for it requires constant attentiveness to what is actually said and a good memory for what has already been said. In a class, it requires patience from the students, for a dialectical exchange can take place with only two people at time, and others who are eager to jump in and participate must wait for a line of reasoning to reach its natural conclusion. Finally, it requires on the part of the answerer a boldness in submitting his opinions to rigorous examination. Those observing the dialectical exchange very often take pleasure in recognizing errors in the position of either interlocutor, and they develop a burning eagerness to participate as well. Far from inducing somnolence, a dialectical exchange becomes as riveting as a cross-examination at a trial. For the practitioner the chief problem is the inevitability of an eventual execution by hemlock.

Dialectic is characterized by a terrifically high degree of reason. And responsible for the high degree of reason is that the speakers are debating some issue that is important. Now the key word in the preceding sentence is not "important"; the key word is "debating," a word which is about all I can think of to translate the Greek word which really applies—agon, from which we get our English word "agony." Perhaps some combination of the English word "struggle" and "debate" will convey the meaning of the Greek word. Debate, you see, has been debased into a formal presentation by a series of speakers of second-hand arguments on an issue which none of the speakers really cares about. In the modern sense of "debate," debaters are like the famous Greek Sophists Gorgias or Polus—they don't care which side of the argument they take. "Struggle," on the other hand, signifies something that is vital, some "life-and-death" conflict, in which those struggling exert their every ounce of energy, physical and psychic, because they know that all they hold dear is at stake. Now if we imagine a combination of debate and a struggle, we will see such a "life-and-death" conflict, but one that is only psychic—or which calls forth the physical only as an aid to the psyche. To hold up your end of an argument with a dialectician requires a good physique, an excellent memory, strong power of analysis, and pure gumption—a willingness to stay at your post and never quit, no matter how overwhelming the odds may seem. For your end is truth, not victory, whereas in debate it is victory, not truth.

Now in physical conflicts, like boxing matches and wrestling matches, we have certain rules of conduct, which the participants must not break—for if they do we call them

"fouls," a noun formed from the adjective "foul." Synonyms for "foul" are "unfair," "dirty," "low," "mean," "crooked." Well, mental and psychic debates, and struggles, have the same kind of rules. These rules are laid out in Plato's Gorgias. It seemed to me, as I was thinking about this piece for the year-book, that I could do nothing better than go through these rules. In dialectical conversations, some of those who debate and struggle grow desperate in their struggle and commit fouls, or turn coward and run. Here, then, are the rules:

- when someone asks a question, keep the answer short
- if the interlocutors are to pursue truth, they must both desire to understand what their dialogue is about.
- both parties must understand that the questioner is speaking on behalf of the audience (the members of the class), many of whom are too shy to speak.
- the speakers must be of good will and consistent. If the answerer is caught in a contradiction, he must not become angry. Indeed, to be caught in a contradiction is not a disgrace, but a blessing, for you now know that what you thought was in error, and surely no one wants to be in error.
- the aim is agreement, between the interlocutors and with reality, for if we use words correctly, they should square with reality.
- when there is such agreement, there is friendship, for truth has the power of uniting men in friendship, as error and lies do not.
- the dialogue must be one-on-one. It is not possible to practice dialectic with a crowd.
- contradiction guarantees that what has been said is not true. Hence, if a choice has to be made between what is contradictory and what is not contradictory, then what is not contradictory—no matter how absurd it may look—is true.
- there are three pre-requisites of intellectual character for engaging in dialectic: (1) knowledge—you must recognize when words square with reality; (2) good will—you must have your opponent's welfare at heart; that is, you must be arguing for truth, not victory; (3) you must speak freely, that is, you must say what is on your mind and not hold back.

- you must be aware that repetition does not invalidate truth. No matter how familiar a truth may be to you, no matter how trite a truism may sound, you must acknowledge its truth and not turn away out of boredom, looking for something different out of a desire for novelty.

- there must be sincerity. If the interlocutor does not say what he really believes, then the implied contract made at the beginning of the dialogue is destroyed, and the search for truth is destroyed.

- all should participate in the search for truth, for only from such sincere, prolonged competition will truth come. And truth is a common good for all mankind.

- if the argument is true, one must see what follows from it. In other words, the dialogue must go on, no matter where it leads.

Now any session of dialogue and dialectic will necessarily be (a) incomplete; (b) personal. It is for this reason that both parties must keep questioning, in order to explore as many of the possible routes as necessary in order to find consistency and truth. Since we do not know in advance which route is correct, the search may take a long time. But one must stick to one's post. Courage is the prime virtue.

Furthermore, any questioner discovers, after a while, that certain routes tend to be well traveled. He gets so that he can tell exactly how certain arguments are going to proceed. But, once again, the questioner is not at liberty to say to the answerer, "Look, I've been down that route. It gets nowhere, so let's skip it, huh." No, the questioner must go down that route no matter how dull and degrading and futile it may be.

I've spent most of my life going down dead-end roads with students. Raymond Chandler's hero Philip Marlowe was not the first to know that "Down these mean streets a man must go." Socrates knew that truth 2500 years ago.

Dialectic presents some practical difficulties, both as a method and for the practitioner. It requires constant attentiveness, and patience, and boldness.

THEATER

REVIVES THEATER AT
HAMPDEN-SYDNEY

BY PATRICK FRANKLIN '98

As Shirley Kagan sits in her office trying to reach an essential crew member who hasn't shown up, two other crew members wait patiently in the theatre's balcony across the hall from her office. The set construction is still under way with less than two weeks to go until opening night, valuable time is slipping away, and Kagan doesn't look at all frazzled. "Go home," she advises the waiting crew members; no set building would get done this Friday afternoon.

Kagan is new to Hampden-Sydney, but she is not new to the trials of stage production, and she is nonchalant about those trials. "It's always like this when you do a production," she says.

Kagan describes her role in the process of producing a play for the public as that of the "traffic coordinator." She organizes a casting call, chooses the actors who will be in the play, selects designers for lighting, makeup, and costumes, and appoints stage managers. After that, although she does provide some artistic input, she says her main job is to step back and facilitate a situation in which the students can fulfill their artistic vision.

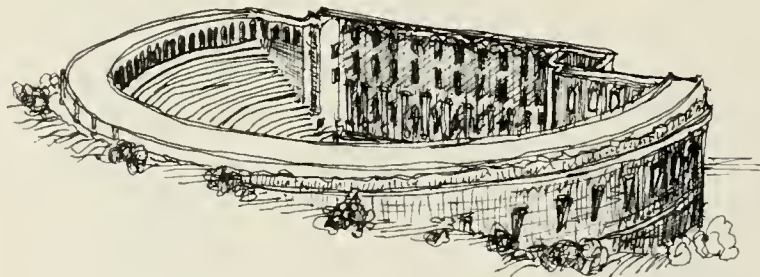

For her first year of teaching in the Fine

Arts Department at Hampden-Sydney, Kagan chose two very different plays to direct. For the fall semester she chose Arthur Miller's All My Sons, and for the spring, La Ronde by Arthur Schnitzler.

"I've always wanted to direct Arthur Miller. He is a great playwright, but I didn't want to do Death of a Salesman; it's a great play, but everybody does it." Although she was in Japan when she selected All My Sons, and had no idea that the College would be having the Family Symposium in the fall, the theme of the play, which deals with the issues of business ethics and familial loyalty, fit in very well with the symposium.

Kagan's choice of La Ronde was a bold one. Set in decadent 19th-century Vienna, the play consists of a series of scenes involving sexual relationships. She explains that she wanted to look at Schnitzler because he examines the consequences of sexual immorality and decadence in society—symptoms many ascribe to twentieth century America. It might be considered dangerous in many corners to raise these issues in a conservative environment like Hampden-Sydney's, but the play managed to draw sizable audiences from students and faculty alike.

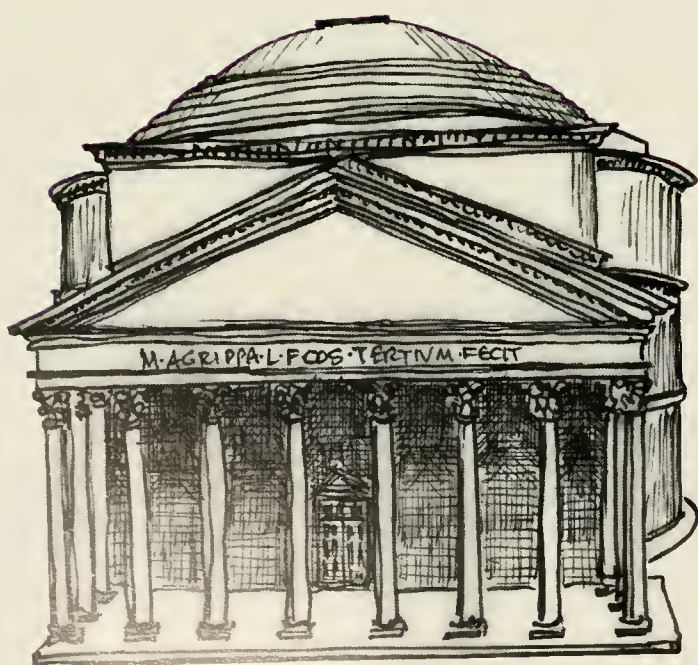

You might expect that being in charge of the theater department in a college that began offering degrees in Fine Arts only a few years ago and one without female students (she has to rely mostly on Longwood for actresses. No Shakespearean cross-dressing here.) would be a difficult transition for someone who has spent her career working in large departments with actors and crew members who want to work professionally. Not at all, says Kagan. "It's really been great. The students here are so enthusiastic."

APRIL 6, 1865

IN HONOR OF THE 3100 SOLDIERS
WHO MADE THE ULTIMATE SACRIFICE
IN THIS PLACE – THOSE WHO DIED
IN HASTILY BUILT TRENCHES, AND THOSE WHO ATTACKED THOSE TRENCHES. IN THE HORROR OF
THOSE FINAL HOURS BEGAN THE REALIZATION OF MANY LIBERTIES
WE ENJOY TODAY.

INDEPENDENCE DAY HAMPDEN-SYDNEY FOUNDED IN 1776, DEFENDED IN 1996

BY AARON FOLDENAUER

Capping off an eight-month-long emotional public debate, the Board of Trustees has resolved—in the face of fiscal and philosophical concerns—for Hampden-Sydney to remain the oldest college in the country to admit only men.

The decision, a blow to the faculty and its Dean but a boon to most students and alumni, means that advocates of coeducation will have to wait well past 1996 for coeducation to be seriously considered again for Hampden-Sydney, a college that has been in operation since 1776.

President Samuel V. Wilson said it was “such a relief” to end the debate that had been ongoing since January.

“As the debate continued, I had the feeling that people were digging their holes deeper and deeper,” Wilson said in an exclusive Tiger interview. “We wound up with trenches running from Switzerland to the North Sea. It was finally time to blow a whistle, make a decision, and get on with it.”

The decision to remain all-male will disturb some people, said Wilson at the announcement, but he added, “Tiny Hampden-Sydney College threatens no one. This is not some sort of attack on society.

“In a country as rich, and powerful, and freedom loving as is the United States, we should be able to afford choices—options—to our young people as long as we possibly can...so we are holding out, I think, intelligently.”

Wilson played the role of a moderator during the debate, but now that everyone has been listened to, he is expecting all staff who favored coeducation to put aside their personal feelings and support the decision.

And, Wilson came close to demanding that alumni start sending in more money to the College since the decision went their way.

Asked during a Richmond radio interview if the alumni were going to be donating more money to the College, Wilson replied, “They’d better! Alumni have been beating me over the head. There have been machine gun rounds of heavy artillery barrages falling on me for the last eight months from alumni who have been insisting that we cannot go coed. Now they have an opportunity to put their money where their expressed convictions were, and I expect them to do so.”

Despite claims of great practical benefits from advocates of coeducation, studies released by Paul Baker, Assistant to the President, show that over a ten year period, the College would be worse off under coeducation than as an all-male institution.

The data show that, under an enhanced all-male plan, the College would be $5.77 million in debt after ten years; under a coeducational plan, the College would be $6.55 million in debt after ten years.

Baker said the projections could be slightly erroneous since there are so many variables that can affect performance over ten years. He also said he did not anticipate that the College will be going into debt because of various budgetary changes that will be made.

Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Bill Boines, for example, has asked Wilson to cut the expenditures of the enhanced all-male plan by at least 25 percent.

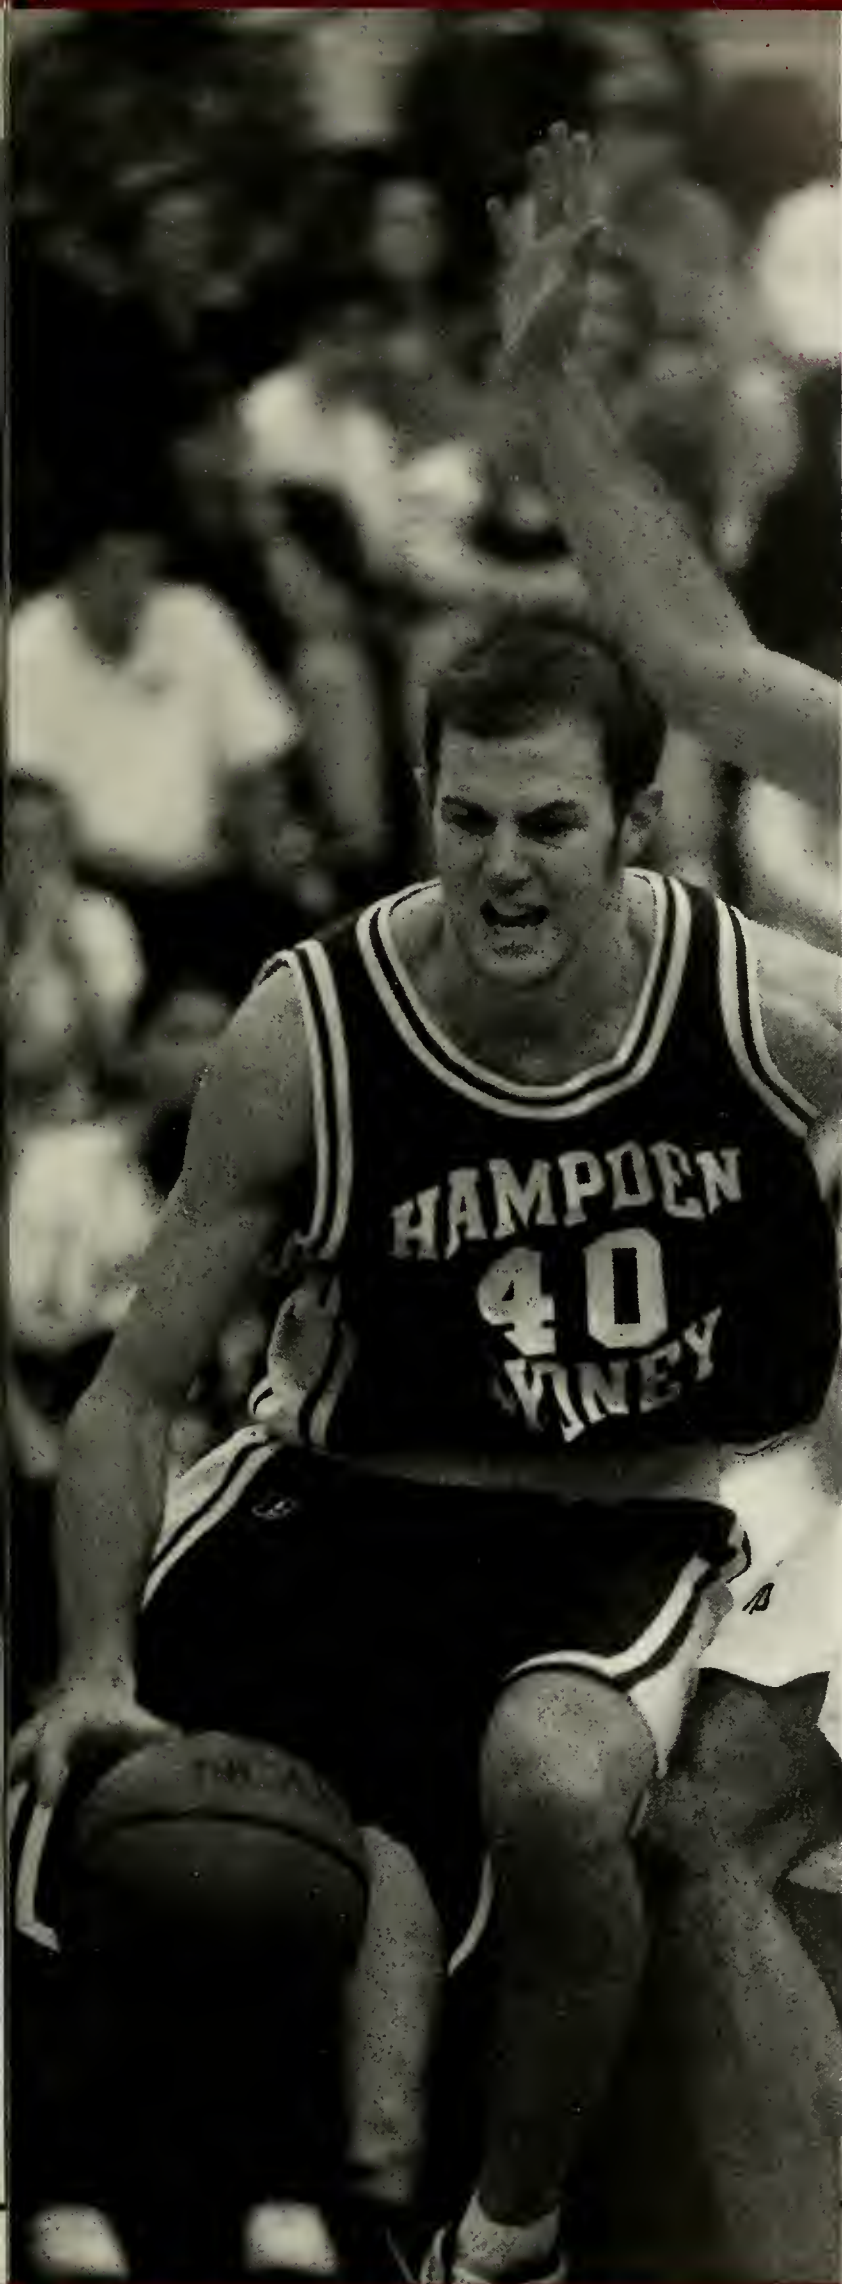

Even though Wilson is behind the decision of the Trustees, he says that if Hampden-Sydney were a business, it would have gone coeducational a long time ago. He adds that coeducation may be inevitable for Hampden-Sydney sometime in the future.

“True, coeducation may be inevitable for Hampden-Sydney,” said James Y. Simms, Professor of History. “But death is inescapable too. There is no need to rush either.”

Richard Furr

The Outsiders Club, first organized in 1968 by Professor Stan Gemborys, is open to all members of the Hampden-Sydney community who maintain an active interest in the outdoors. One of its main goals is to provide outdoor equipment for community use, offering a wide range of equipment that can be rented for a nominal fee. The club also keeps a small library of books and other information pertaining to the outdoors.

The heart of the Outsiders Club is its leadership, whose goal is raise awareness of outdoor activities and to organize and conduct outdoor trips for the college community. Possible club trips are white watterrafting, caving, snow skiing, fly fishing, canoeing, kayaking, rock climbing, and many others. Tadpole Pavilion is the club's headquarters.

JONGLEURS

President: Shaun Irving

The Jongleurs made their presence felt on campus again this year, in the most subtle ways. As usual, they were the working force behind one of the campus productions, helping to sponsor the first semester production of Henry IV in conjunction with the Fine Arts department. In addition, they provided financial backing to the Sydistic Hampsters for their annual Parting Shots show.

Fortunately, it was not all work and no play for the club. Members had the opportunity to watch professional performances in Washington, D.C. and locally, and in addition had a number of club social functions.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA

Officers:

President: Matt Sherrard

Vice President: John Neuner

Faculty Advisor: Linda Martin

Faculty Secretary: Lee Cohen

Omicron Delta Kappa is a national leadership honor society for college men and women. It was founded in 1914 at Washington & Lee University to recognize and encourage superior scholarship and leadership by men and women of exemplary character. Membership in ODK is a mark of highest distinction and honor.

The Lambda Circle was founded at Hampden-Sydney on April 12, 1924, and is the eleventh-oldest of the society's more than 200 circles. To be selected as a member of the Lambda Circle, a junior or senior must be in the top 35% of his class and must have actively participated in three and demonstrated constructive leadership in two of the five areas of college life considered by the society: scholarship; athletics; social service, religious activities, and campus government; journalism, speech, and the mass media; and creative and performing arts. Men selected for membership are tapped in the fall and spring. The members of Omicron Delta Kappa seek to use their personal influence as campus leaders to better campus life and to encourage high standards in all activities.

In addition to regular selection of members, the Circle awards each fall to a sophomore a $500 scholarship in recognition of constructive leadership and academic achievement during his freshman year, and each spring, the ODK Citizenship Award to a senior who by his actions and example has contributed significantly to the betterment of the College community.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

Chief: Dr. Ken Townsend
President: Robert Boyd

Although the majority of members are students, the Hampden-Sydney Volunteer Fire Department is not a student club nor a College organization. Rather, the Hampden-Sydney Volunteer Fire Department is a non-profit corporation that was reorganized in October 1970 and incorporated in 1982 as a Prince Edward County Fire Department to provide fire protection to the College and central areas of Prince Edward County. The department is operated by corporation officers consisting of President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Member-at-Large. Fireground operations are directed by the Chief, Assistant Chief, Captain, and three Lieutenants. All offices and positions are elected by the active membership.

THE GARNET

The aim of the Garnet (founded in 1859 as the Hampden-Sydney Magazine and published annually since then, with a few interruptions around wartimes) is to offer members of the community an opportunity to demonstrate their literary ability by expressing themselves through their creative efforts. Each year the Garnet publishes an outstanding collection of poems, short stories, essays, photography and other art work by student writers and artists and other contributors.

CUSHING REPORT

BY M. McCROSKERY

Immediately after the closing of classes last Spring came the closing of the oldest and most recognizable building on Hampden-Sydney's campus. Cushing Hall, which had once housed the entire College, closed in order to begin the much-needed repairs for which the College had been campaigning furiously during recent years to finance

Following months of demolition, reroofing, and asbestos removal, the contract for construction was awarded last December 5 to Hayward and Lee General Contractors and rebuilding began in earnest. Included in the renovation is an entirely new heating and cooling system which works in conjunction with the system already in place for Carpenters X and Y. Also included are an upgrade on all plumbing, new restrooms, enclosed stairwells, a smoke and fire detection and sprinkler system, a new roof, rebuilt chimneys, and a few structural repairs. Handicap parking has been added and ground floor of first and fourth passage, in compliance with ADA standards, will now accommodate handicap residents. The second and third passages will now connect on all four floors, and the "gang shower," which had haunted generations of incoming freshmen, have been replaced by individual shower stalls.

Although two student rooms were added to what was once the boiler room, Cushing, which has held up to 110 residents, will now hold 102. Each room will be wired for computer and cable and will feature its own air-handling unit which allows individual heating and cooling control. Additionally, there will be a lounge on every passage.

The stairwells, which, according to fire safety code, were too steep for safe evacuation, have been lengthened and enclosed, and the fire escape on the rear of the building will be removed. During the rebuilding process, builders discovered that the stairs were not constructed atop a foundation of concrete, as is typical, but instead rested directly upon the dirt, a condition which was remedied immediately.

The process of restoring Cushing Hall, begun more than three years ago, will end on June 30th of this year when the new hall will reopen. The final pricetag for the project will reach the $3 million mark, which, according to physical plant director Tom Gregory, is "right on target." Although the builders were met with a few surprises along the way, including the stairs being built on the dirt, and the discovery of three layers of asbestos in the floor tiles, the project has run relatively smoothly since demolition began back in September. Part of the reason for this, says Gregory, is that Cushing Hall, although it is the oldest building on campus, is structurally sound, so most repairs have been superficial.

Forthcoming cosmetic repairs will include the complete rebuilding of the columns and steps at the front entrances of the hall and refurbishment of the landscaping surrounding the building. The floors on the ground level of each passage will also be rebuilt, using the slate from the old roof.

Construction of Cushing Hall began in 1822 and was completed 11 years later at the cost of $45,000.

Modeled after Nassau Hall at Princeton University, Cushing was built with bricks fired from the very clay of Hampden-Sydney. For years it held the College chapel, library, classrooms, laboratories, faculty apartments, and student rooms. Recent debate on who would be chosen to live in the renewed Cushing Hall was settled last week after Associate Dean of Students David Klein and members of the Student Senate met to discuss the merits of filling the hall with freshmen, as has been the case for the past several years, or mix of upper- and lower-classmen. The group reached a decision and according to Dean of Students Lewis Drew, "Cushing Hall next year will house freshmen only."

THE STUDENT MUSEUM BOARD

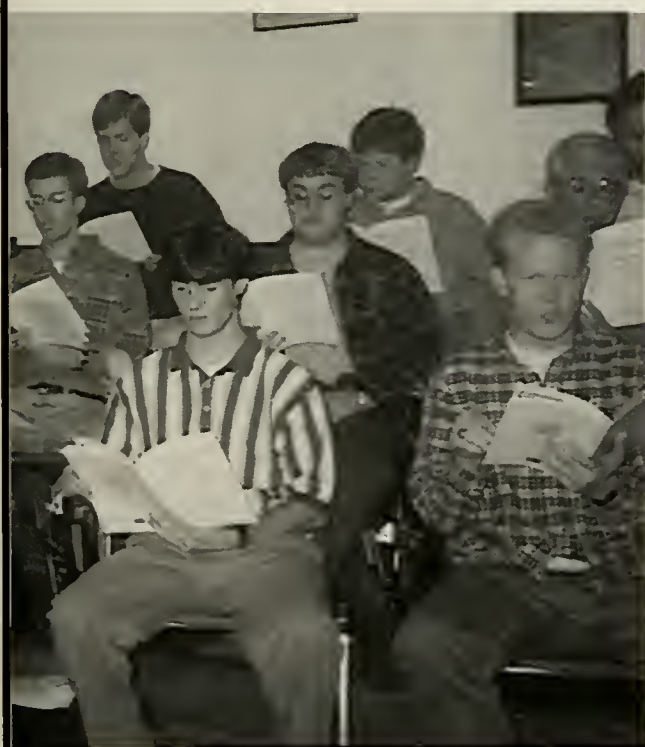

The Student Museum Board of the Esther Thomas Atkinson Museum of Hampden-Sydney is a student-run organization designed to preserve and promote Hampden-Sydney's rich 222-year history. The student volunteers provide tours for the Museum, aid in artifact preservation, help set up exhibits, encourage research, sponsor lectures, and write articles pertaining to the history of the College. The responsibilities offer an excellent opportunity for members to serve the school and interact with alumni, students, and friends.

The Hampden-Sydney Glee Club (led this year by President John Pumphrey) is a small choral group and is one of the oldest official organizations on campus. The group is comprised of Hampden-Sydney men (and a few faculty) who are interested in either continuing their singing background or in actually learning to sing. Hence, gentlemen who have any sort of musical experience or ambition are invited to join the group.

The Glee Club traditionally gives two major concerts during the year, often in association with women's choirs. In recent years the Glee Club has joined ranks with Mary Baldwin College and has sung pieces by Gershwin, Handel, Schubert, and Stravinsky. We performed John Rutter's Gloria last year at both Mary Baldwin and Hampden-Sydney as part of the colleges' annual Christmas concerts. The Glee Club is also asked to sing at a number of social events (from alumni dinners to class reunions) and is customarily invited to sing the National Anthem at our home football games.

UNION-PHILANTHROPIC LITERARY SOCIETY

President: Jon Vaughn
First Reviewer: William Homiller
Second Reviewer: J.D. Jordan
Clerk: Ben Tremonte
Treasurer: Danny Barlow
Advisor: Mr. John Brinkley

For over two centuries, the Union-Philanthropic Society has offered Hampden-Sydney a unique forum for discussion. Whether debating the ethics of slavery—in 1810—or discussing the various views of the historical Jesus—in 1996—the Society has continually provided the College with an unparalleled source for the oratorical and literary improvement of her sons. Rather than narrowly focus on a single subject, the Society has long complemented the College's liberal curriculum by addressing topics from a variety of issues. The oldest student organization at the College and the second-oldest debating society in America, the Union-Philanthropic dates from 1789. Edward Henry, the son of Virginia's greatest orator, and William Henry Harrison, the ninth president of the United States, were among its early members. Yet the society has never been simply a student organization, and its influence has never stopped at the College gates. Men from all backgrounds, from Henry Wadsworth Longfellow to Robert E. Lee, have been awarded—and have accepted—honorary membership. Membership in the Society is an honor which is bestowed upon gentlemen who demonstrate an interest in public discussion, a thirst for learning, a friendly manner, and a good character. A reception for prospective members is held each term, followed by several public meetings; all students are cordially invited to attend and are strongly encouraged to participate. The Society summons several men to become members each term, and no previous experience in speech or debate is required.

PRE-LAW SOCIETY

The Hampden-Sydney Pre-Law Society was established in 1977 to serve the needs of students who are exploring the possibility of entering the field of law or are actively applying to law school. The Society's aim is to acquire and make available information regarding the practice of law and associated vocation in the field, prerequisites for the study of law, and the admission requirements and procedures of law schools. The Society serves as a forum for the discussion of a broad array of issues relating to the study and practice of law.

In 1997, the Pre-Law Society sponsored a panel discussion on juvenile delinquency, provided LSAT workshops for students who planned to take the test, and arranged a moot court with a panel of law school students presiding over the debate. In 1998, the Society visited law schools, sponsored numerous speakers, and visited the Supreme Court of the United States.

SOCIETY FOR THE PRESERVATION OF SOUTHERN HERITAGE

The Hampden-Sydney Society for the Preservation of Southern Heritage is for Hampden-Sydney College students with a special interest in southern history and heritage. The "Southern Heritage Society" holds monthly meetings with guest speakers and programs of interest. Field trips are organized to historic sites and battlefields.

We support the Southern traditions of dedication to the Constitution of the United States, a strong family unit, religious faith, courage, honor, integrity, respect for womanhood, and self-reliance.

We endeavor to promote knowledge, understanding, and the true history of the region of the United States known as the South, and to perpetuate the knowledge of contributions made by Southern citizens, both civil and military, to the establishment and development of this great nation.

Good Men and Good Citizens is a student-led organization which encourages and coordinates individual and group involvement in the service of the surrounding community. Under the direction of the Chairman, this organization has several programs which let Hampden-Sydney students, faculty, and staff develop the links among service, good citizenship, and leadership. G.M.G.C. is divided into individual programs, which are led by students with a particular interest or expertise in that area. Each Program Director is responsible for enlisting volunteers, getting them started in the program, and ensuring that the program runs smoothly throughout the year. Every member of the Hampden-Sydney College community is encouraged to take advantage of the opportunities offered by G.M.G.C.

CLUB LACROSSE

The Hampden-Sydney Lacrosse Club seeks to provide an opportunity for students to play the game of lacrosse on a non-varsity level. The club plays Virginia college club teams in a friendly but competitive nature. Practices are held on most Monday and Thursday afternoons. The club is open to all experience levels, and an additional practice is held every Tuesday to focus on beginning skills. The club attempts to provide a low-pressure atmosphere to play lacrosse that encourages good sportsmanship and enjoyable recreation.

INTER-VARSITY CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship (IVCF) is the Hampden-Sydney and Longwood chapter of an interdenominational group open to all students. We join together on the basis of faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and personal Lord. Activities include fellowship on Thursday evenings, small group Bible studies and prayer groups throughout the week, services at local nursing homes, community service projects, special speakers, picnics, and regional conferences.

CHI BETA PHI

Founded at Randolph-Macon College in 1916 and installed at Hampden-Sydney in 1921, Chi Beta Phi is a national honorary scientific fraternity. It exists to recognize excellence in scientific endeavors and to encourage participation in scientific fields. A bid to membership is extended to students who have shown a continued study of the natural sciences with a 3.3 average or better and an overall GPA of 3.0 or better. Among its activities, the fraternity sponsors speakers to help spread scientific knowledge and appreciation.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

ADVERTISEMENTS

K.D., You've given us many great memories over the last 22 years. We've enclosed a few pictures to help you and us remember the past. We have really enjoyed sharing with you the fun, excitement, struggles, and hard work of college life at Hampden-Sydney while watching you grow from a promising young man to a mature, confident graduate. We want to take this opportunity to tell you we are proud of you, and we look forward to many more good times with you in the future. Congratulations to you on all your accomplishments!

THE HOURS WERE LONG
THE PARTIES SO FEW,
IT MAKES A GOOD STORY
IF ONLY IT WERE TRUE.

ALL KIDDING ASIDE
WE'VE JUST ONE THING TO SAY,
WE'RE BURSTING WITH PRIDE
ON YOUR GRADUATION DAY.

CONGRATULATIONS- MOM,
DAD, STEPH, AND TULES

Dearest Son...

*"It's a boy" they said as we heard you cry
And cradled you in our arms.
Gazing upon your tiny face
We were awestruck by your charms.*

*Diapers, tears, and laughter
Schoolwork, fun, and flu...
Baseball games to teenage days-
Lovely scenes of you.*

*Lost in love and hassle
The years go rushing by...
We woke up then one morning
And heard you say "Goodbye."*

*You childhood's a special memory
But we thank God above...
For the man and friend born from that child.
You'll always have our love.*

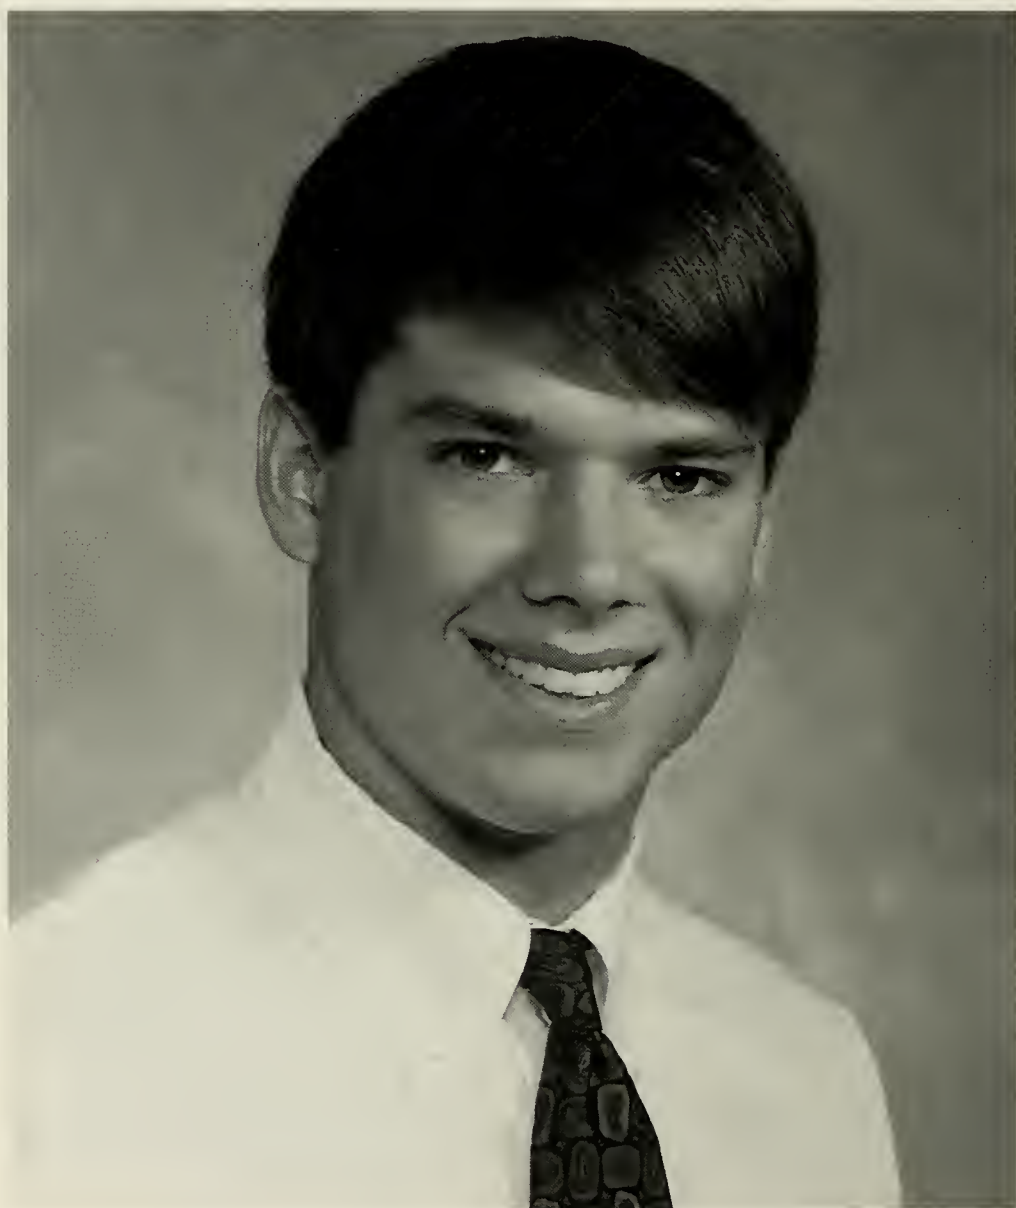

JUSTIN SWISHER,

WE HAVE ALWAYS ADMIRERD YOU TOO!!!!...

CONGRATULATIONS ON YOUR GRADUATION. WE ARE SO PROUD OF YOU.

LOVE,
MOM AND DAD
